

What We Do

The courses offered by Family Enrichment make use of the case-study method, which is commonly found in business- and law-school classrooms. The case studies center the discussion of each class on real situations with which participants can identify. They are rich in complex family situations that help bring to the forefront various aspects within the life of the family that are essential for proper, productive relationships among family members: husband and wife, parents and children, sibling relationships, immediate family with extended family and friends.

While the case studies are instructive, it is the wisdom brought to bear on them from the experience of the participating couples, crystallized in the general session by a professional moderator, that often provides the greatest insights.

Who We Are

Family Enrichment is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to the support of the family as the natural environment for the children's education and promotes the exchange of family experiences.

As the first and primary educators of their children, it is incumbent upon fathers and mothers to do the best job they can in raising their children. This takes constant effort and study. The courses offered by St. Louis Family Enrichment serve to help parents carry out this great responsibility.

The courses encourage parents to educate their young children as a whole: nurturing the psychological, intellectual and cultural aspects of each child.

We are affiliated with the International Federation for Family Development www.iffd.org. Our mission is to strengthen the family and support husbands and wives in an atmosphere of friendship. More information can also be found at www.familyenrichmentusa.org.
